Defining Space

The height of the letter 'L' in our logo sets the standard for spacing around the logo, ensuring it stands out with clarity and impact in every application.

Logo Usage

Below are some examples of how to avoid using our logo, ensuring it always looks its best and accurately represents our brand across all applications.

Primary Color Palette

The Comcast NBCUniversal brand color purple has been chosen and different tints and shades have been created to make it versatile and easy to use across various brand materials.

How to use the primary palette

Ensure there is high contrast between text and background for readability. Use the primary palette across typography, shapes, iconography, and other graphic elements to maintain consistency and enhance the brand's visual harmony.

Tints and Shades

Tint

Created when white is added to a pure hue or color. These colors are lighter and less intense versions of the original color. We often think of these colors as softer hues like pastels.

Shade

Created when black is added to a pure hue or color. These colors are darker than the original color and often have a more intense, richer quality to them.

Gradient Construction

Each lettered point represents a brand color, use consecutive points together to create a gradient.

Line Length

It's important to set up a comfortable reading environment to make reading easier. Wide lines of text can be challenging to read and make it harder for readers to focus.

Although there's no exact measurement, you should aim for a line length between 40 and 80 characters, including spaces. Setting an optimal line length will help break the content into easily digestible information.

Guidelines

Personal connection and engagement are the key elements of the LIFT Labs brand. Images should look natural and not staged, flowing well with the surrounding environment. Perspectives should be artful and warm. One single photograph that captures a moment should be the central element of any layout.

Gradients & Photography Usage

Gradients start from the edge of a composition and transition from 60-100% to 0%. The gradient should only support the composition so it shouldn't cover any people or faces.

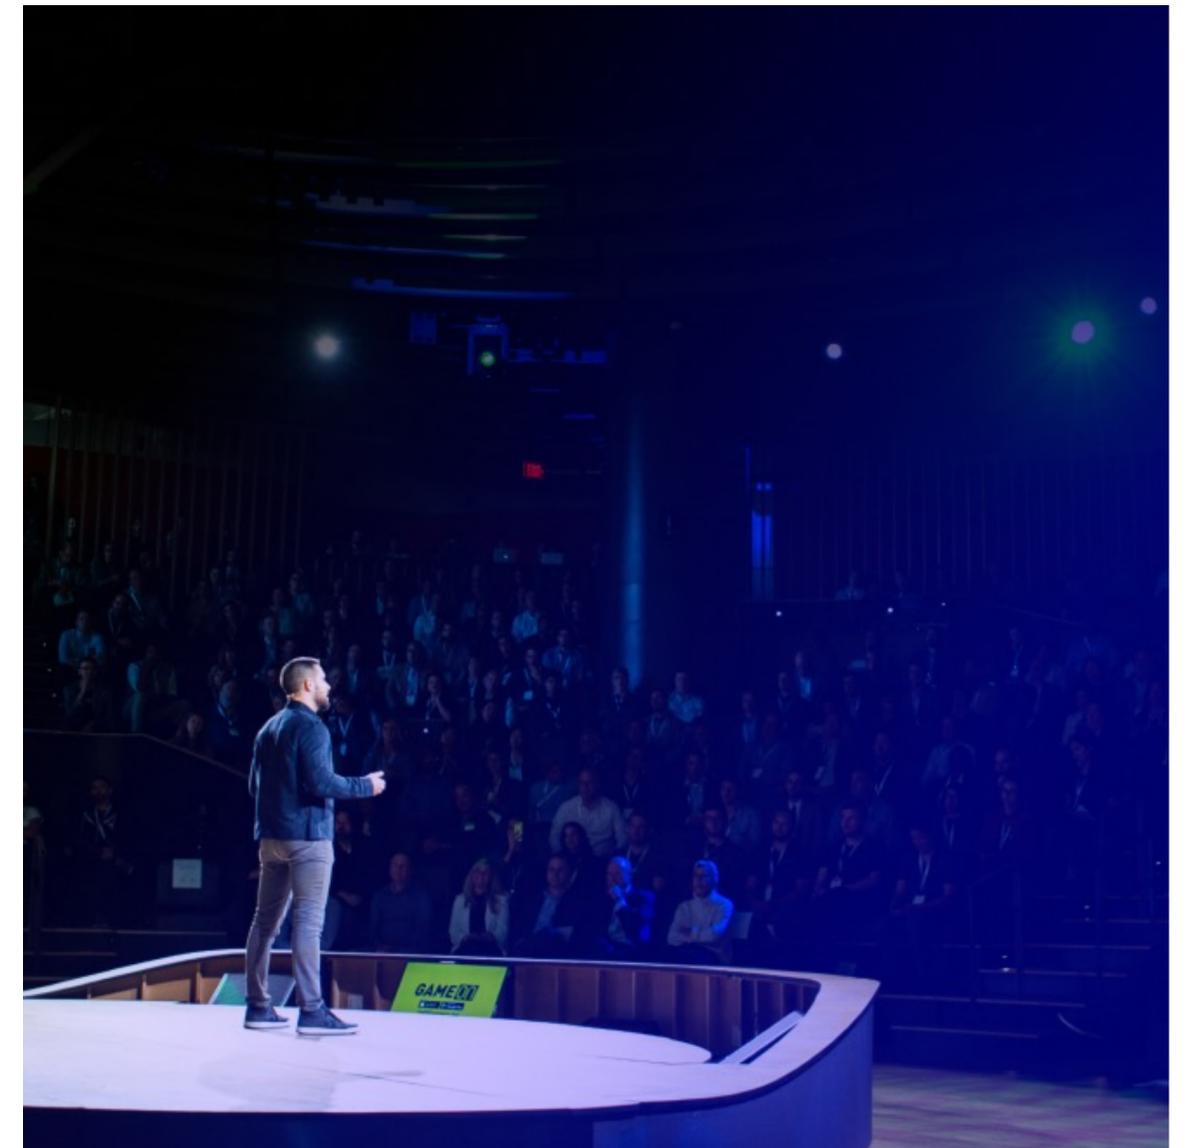

Layer effects like hard-light and soft-light can help the gradient blend with colors from the visuals

Creating Photography Masks

Masking + Cutout

You can get creative with the masks by using cutouts of people that overlap outside of the mask.

4x5 Dimensions

This dimension is ideal for social media posts where the 1x1 format serves as the safe area in case of cropping.

4x5 Content Placements

The header and footer sections can be utilized for subordinate text, tags, small print, or logos, while the content areas can be used for anything to engage with. Anything in the safe zone will always be visible.

4x5 Profile vs Feed Cropping

The header and footer sections will be cropped on a user's profile page, but visible scrolling through the feed.
